

Adaptation

Adaptations happen when animals change to survive in their environment. This happens over generations. Owl butterflies have a big spot on their wing that looks like an owl's eye. Birds that want to eat butterflies would never attack an owl. Because the owl butterflies look like an owl, birds don't attack them. This spot is an example of a protective adaptation.