

Identity Verification Requirements (For Kiosk In-Person Requests)

The District of Columbia Vital Records Division has a 100% identity verification policy. Proof of the requestor's identity is required no matter which ordering method is selected. Requestor must meet our identity and entitlement verification requirements in order to receive a certificate.

If the name on the identification does not match the name on the certificate, the applicant must provide evidence of a legal name change. This may include a certified marriage certificate, certified divorce decree or a certified legal name change court order that reflects the history of the changes to the name(s) on the certificate(s) requested. The address on your vital records application must match the address on the applicable identity documents you provide. The following Identity Verification Requirements list the documents required as proof of identity to receive District of Columbia Birth, Death or Domestic Partnership (D.P.) certificates:
